1. Welcome and Introduction to FdA Creative Media Production

Welcome to FdA Creative Media Production delivered at Weymouth by Weymouth College.

The FdA Creative Media Production offered at Weymouth College offers candidates a number of unique experiences encompassing both studio and location production in documentary, drama, corporate and music video genres. Our production technologies are upgraded to keep pace with the evolving media industries and students are expected to engage in a minimum of four weeks industry experience.

The corporate video elements of the course engage with real world clients and briefs and students can find themselves working alongside staff on projects for large organisations as well as local companies and enterprises. The same is true for music video and community projects during which students work with groups in the local area to make videos with a focussed promotional or educational purpose. The work-based learning module gives students the opportunity to identify and engage in meaningful work experience with media professionals in studios, production companies and facilities houses. Students will be prepared for this engagement by honing those presentation skills recognised and expected by the media industries and training on appropriate platforms.

All of these production experiences are geared towards developing students' creativity, professional abilities and an awareness of the potential employment markets available to the competent video practitioner. In addition to the creative and technical skills associated with video production, students may explore video mapping, installation and 3D production design applications in their optional units in both years of the programme.

The majority of teaching staff are practicing professionals with many years of production experience in their field and this is reflected in the success of previous graduates from Weymouth in gaining employment in the creative media industries, either as freelancers or by starting their own production companies.

The taught programme is supported by guest lectures from practicing professionals in film and television as well as a visit programme which includes international trade events and film festivals.

This programme has been designed to equip you with the skills and knowledge base required to work in your chosen specialism or other graduate opportunities. It is also a platform from which you can undertake additional vocational and academic qualifications.

Brief Description of the Programme

The Foundation Degree in Creative Media Production at Weymouth College is designed for students wishing to develop a range of creative and technical skills in digital video, a greater understanding of visual communication and an informed strategy for entry into the creative media industries. The course provides training in camera, sound, lighting, direction, editing and post production techniques developed through working on a variety of drama, documentary, music and experimental video production. There is a commercial element to the course in which students work to external client briefs to create artefacts with a function and purpose in the world beyond the college.

The programme also develops students' critical and analytical faculties enabling further higher level study. Research, presentation and academic writing skills are developed to prepare students for level 6 dissertation elements and the technical and creative aims of the programme will also facilitate progression to BA programmes with a production focus.

This is a production-led course which aims to graduate practitioners with a broad cultural frame of reference for their production work. It is designed to nurture students' creativity in all aspects of video production; to provide opportunities to acquire and develop relevant industry skills and working practices in order to successfully enter the industry.

Valuable transferable research skills are taught, along with the ability to reflect on learners' own practice, to analyse and evaluate their work to in search of the desired professional standards. Facilities available to students include a full HD multicam TV studio and digital audio suite with radio room; multiple HD location cameras with portable lighting and audio accessories and excellent software packages for editing.

Ultimately, contemporary professional practice is the key focus of the course and students will gain an understanding of today's media industries through work experience, lectures, seminars and independent research. A programme of visits to studios and trade shows plus guest lectures from prominent industry practitioners will complement the classroom and studio-based delivery.

Programme Aims

1. Access to a higher level programme of study in media for suitably qualified people.
2. A platform for critical engagement with major theories, debates, technologies and practices relevant to the digital moving image
3. The levels of key interpersonal, academic, analytic and reflective skills necessary for progression to higher (honours) levels of study and/or employment
4. Specialist study relevant to the individual vocation and environments in which students are aiming to work within the digital creative industries through the provision of work-based learning opportunities in the industry and the broader community.
5. Training in a range of technical and creative skills required for success in employment in the digital creative industry.

Programme Intended Learning Outcomes (ILO)

By the end of this programme the student will be able to:

ILO1 (Generic understanding of the industry):

- Demonstrate a detailed knowledge and understanding of the professional, technical and regulatory frameworks which underpin existing broadcast television and independent video production practices and traditions
- Demonstrate awareness of the historical emergence of today's media, the changing roles of media producers and media consumers in the context of video-based media

ILO2 (Analytical skills):

- Demonstrate an ability to use media theory to engage critically with some of the major thinkers, debates and intellectual paradigms within the field of digital creative media
- Undertake research to critically examine relevant digital media forms, specifically the way they organise understanding, meaning and effects
- Understand how different social groups variously make use of and engage with forms of communication, media and culture

ILO 3 (Reflection):

- Consider and evaluate their own work in a critical and reflective manner with reference to academic and professional issues, debates and conventions;
- Reflect and write critically and analytically about experience, achievement and improvement in performance, (their own and their peers).

ILO 4 (Video production - generic):

- Produce work which demonstrates technical competence, creativity and currency with regard to changing conventions of narrative form and function in television, independent video production and multimedia applications
- Demonstrate the technical and organizational skills necessary to function as a member of a production unit, including research and preparation of production management paperwork, risk assessment and budgetary awareness.

ILO 5 (Video production - specific):

- Produce video artefacts that satisfy the negotiated requirements of client briefs or commissions and demonstrate an ability to author for different platforms
- Demonstrate an ability to function effectively in one or more specified roles in the context of the conventional TV studio production unit

ILO 6 (Multi-media production):

- Demonstrate an understanding of the key production and post-production processes and professional practices involved in digitally manipulating the moving image to produce and exhibit multimedia artefacts which reflect contemporary practice

ILO 7 (Group Work):

- Demonstrate the collaborative, technical and creative skills required to contribute productively to a group, showing abilities at different times to listen, engage and lead effectively

ILO 8 (WBL & Professional Dev):

- Demonstrate knowledge of the structure and working practices of media companies including an appreciation of how commissions are obtained and projects managed within broadcast, low budget and independent sectors
- Demonstrate the ability to function effectively in an appropriate professional working environment and understand the freelance employment market
- Reflect critically and analytically on work-based learning experience and plan effectively for further personal and professional development

Explanation and Mapping of Learning Outcomes, Teaching & Learning and Assessment

Developing graduate attributes and skills, at any level of HE, is dependent on the clarity of strategies and methods for identifying the attributes and skills relevant to the programme and where and how these are operationalized. The interrelated factors of Teaching, Learning and Assessment and how these are inclusive in nature, are fundamentally significant to these strategies and methods, as are where and how these are specifically distributed within the programme.

Ordered by graduate attributes and skills, the following table provides a map of the above, plus an exposition to describe and explain the ideas and strategy of each. Therefore, subsequent to the initial completion for approval, maintenance of this table as and when programme structure changes occur is also important:

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

Factual / documentary television is an expanding market in the media industry and this module introduces students, through the short-form of the documentary genre, to the complex considerations of 'ethical' factual film making. Whilst exploring Grierson's 'creative interpretation of the truth' as a concept, students are encouraged to engage with issues of representation when addressing their subject. Production work is group-based.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

Students examine a range of documentary productions with a keen focus on the relationship between subject, style and audience. Lectures will examine historical perspectives but the comparatively recent short-form popularised by Channel 4 4-Docs and similar shorts will predominate. Workshops will cover script development, ethics and legal considerations, logistics, risk and production management.). For the production, students individually pitch ideas for development and the cohort engage with the winning pitch or pitches, (depending on cohort size), as a production team with flexible roles.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

Creating visual effects is a skill which is required for a multitude of film/video applications, it is not all about adding explosions and spaceships, it can also be used in subtle ways for sky replacements or removing unwanted elements from the frame which interfere with the mise-en-scène. VE1 will introduce students to software applications and contemporary techniques for professionally enhancing the audience experience

To provide students with opportunities to develop and extend their skills and judgement in the creative application of post-production techniques.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Demonstrate an understanding of the key production and post-production processes and professional practices involved in manipulating the digital moving image;
2. Produce creative work which demonstrates technical competency and awareness of relevant aesthetic considerations in response to given briefs;
3. Prepare a research and pre-production file prior to production approval;
4. Consider and evaluate his/her own work in a reflective manner.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

In this module students will deconstruct effects and learn not only how to achieve these effects through appropriate software, but also how to plan and film for the addition of post-production effects in the early stages of pre-production. Effects will include green-screen, set extension, 3D modelling, 2D and 3D camera tracking, compositing, and colour grading.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

Students will engage with one or more proactive groups in the community to produce a meaningful media product which furthers the aims of the group or benefits the community generally. For example, facilitating a production for a school; producing a video for an adult learner group or training a group within the local community in video production. (All examples of previously assessed products at this level).

MODULE AIMS:

The module aims to develop the student's ability to work in a group which extends beyond the familiar video production module. Students will plan and participate in a community production project collaborating with contributors or clients with different specialism strengths and needs. The finished product will have specific, real-world intended outcomes for the client group and will give students a taste of 'professional' expectations.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Demonstrate the collaborative, technical and creative skills necessary to produce engaging media artefacts which respond meaningfully to a community-generated brief or commission;
2. Demonstrate an ability to work productively in a group, showing abilities at different times to listen, contribute and lead effectively;
3. Consider and evaluate his/her own work and the performance of their peers in a reflective manner, with reference to academic and professional issues and conventions.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

Typically community groups will have commissioned the project directly via the unit leader though students may suggest appropriate causes if they have contacts. In lectures and tutorials, guidance will be provided to enable students to contextualize their work and reflect critically on the production process. Delivery will be in the form of practical production work with group tutorial support. Regular seminars will provide opportunities for the whole group to meet face to face to determine realistic objectives. Guided analysis of similar professional product and the production process will provide students with appropriate models

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

This module will be taught by seminars and workshops, supported by on-line resources to encourage students to engage with their computers as learning tools - elements of the course are delivered as online tutorials which students can access to hone particular skills prior to assignments. Seminars will focus on both established and developing new practices and explore contemporary aesthetics informing the production of multimedia artefacts. The module will allow students to express their creative abilities and develop skills with an emphasis on producing professional products in response to developing markets in entertainment and the digital creative industries.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

The module builds on the critical understanding of visual media fostered in Theory 1, bringing into focus the debates surrounding contemporary digital media and their relationship with society. In a world where the amateur You-tube contributor or impassioned blogger can reach significant audiences, what is the place and purpose of the professional media producer? Topics covered include regulation, fandom and celebrity, issues of security, identity and micro-cultures which celebrate hacking and wiki-leaking.

MODULE AIMS:

To provide students with an understanding of theoretical approaches to the media and their role in the modern world, with an emphasis on fundamental examination of popular digital media forms and their function in relation to contemporary society. The module aims to build on those critical analytical skills developed in Theory 1.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Identify, analyse and communicate the key concepts relating to the role of digital media in the modern world;
2. Demonstrate detailed understanding of the social, cultural and technological changes which have driven the historical emergence of today's digital media;
1. Select and critically examine different forms of digital media to demonstrate an awareness of how different social groups variously make use of and engage with forms of communication and media.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

This core module underpins the focus of second year in preparing students for effective professional practice in an industry where good client relations and creative interpretation of a brief are essential factors in securing employment. Students will work with external clients (possibly SMEs, possibly larger corporations) to fulfil a real-world brief which may be a commercial project or unpaid – but the assignment requires the client to be satisfied with the product and to be able use it for the intended purpose.

MODULE AIMS:

To provide students with an opportunity to satisfy an external corporate or commercial brief with the production of a commissioned video programme for training or promotional purposes in the 'real-world'.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Identify and respond to the requirements of an external brief to produce a commercially viable video project which demonstrates creativity and high technical competence;
2. Work independently and interact effectively with the production team, showing abilities at different times to listen, negotiate, contribute and lead effectively and to respond to feedback;
3. Demonstrate the ability to function independently as a freelancer with a practical appreciation of how projects are managed within the corporate sector and an awareness of professional codes of practice;
4. Assess his/her own work in a reflective manner, with reference to wider academic and professional issues, debates and conventions.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

This module will be taught by seminars and supported by tutorials and on-line resources. Seminars will explore the conventions and practices of the industry, as well as providing an opportunity for development and planning of ideas and reflection. An introduction to business skills and entrepreneurship will be embedded within the module. Students will work in groups to produce a professional video in response to a brief set by an external client. Students should attempt to secure their own client, though this assignment can be undertaken at any time during the academic year as client-led projects are requested or commissioned from the department.

MODULE AIMS: To provide students with opportunities to further extend their skills and judgement in the creative application of post-production techniques. At the time of writing students are developing their skills in use of the Adobe CS6 suite including Photoshop, Premiere, After Effects, Audition, Speed Grade and Illustrator to polish productions with high quality graphics, titles and credits. The unit also allows for experimentation with Hi-speed, slow motion and tilt-shift techniques.
ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below) At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Demonstrate a detailed understanding of the key production and post-production processes and current professional practices involved in manipulating the digital moving image; 2. Produce creative work which demonstrates technical competency and awareness of relevant aesthetic considerations in response to given briefs; 3. Undertake appropriate research / planning to prepare pre-production file prior to production approval; 4. Assess his/her own work in a reflective manner, with reference to wider academic and professional issues, debates and conventions and demonstrating an awareness of professional codes of practice

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

In this module students will deconstruct effects and learn not only how to achieve these effects through appropriate software, but also how to plan and film for the addition of post-production effects in the early stages of pre-production. Advanced workshops will offer opportunities for enhanced lighting projects in the TV studio including green-screen, and techniques in software applications for 3D modelling, 2D and 3D camera tracking, compositing, and colour grading will be taught.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

The module represents the culmination of the students' work-based learning experience and provides the opportunity for the student to present the evidence and to reflect on the learning opportunities offered by the WBL experience. The assignment includes a report on the nature of the duties carried out and a reflective element allowing students to comment on the usefulness of the work with regard to their career.

MODULE AIMS:

This module aims to provide students with the ability to develop as effective and independent practitioners and an opportunity to develop professional skills in real working environments. It also aims to enable students to produce a personal profile which will include transferable skills, work-based learning and academic achievement.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Interact effectively and professionally in an appropriate working environment;
2. Write analytically about his/her performance and experience of work-based learning;
3. demonstrate a detailed critical understanding of the structure and working methods of a media company;
4. Apply feedback and reflection to plan for the acquisition of further skills which will enhance their employability.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

Students will spend the equivalent of 20 days in a work-based learning environment during the two years of the programme. WBL providers will be monitored by the programme team and H&S managers from college to ensure the safety and educational development of the student. Individual tutorials will support the planning and development of the written reflective analyses for the WBL and the structure and scope of the skills audit.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

Students (in large or small groups) will engage with a local community leisure, action or pressure group; local or county council or 'community' by a looser association to produce a media artefact with a substantial video element. The product should have a planned exhibition platform and audience and be assessed by the client for 'fitness for purpose'. The college has an excellent track record of producing work for HM Prisons, NHS and DCC which has given previous students both confidence and exposure.

MODULE AIMS:

The module aims to develop the student's ability to work in a group which extends beyond the familiar video production module. Students will plan and participate in a community production project collaborating with contributors or clients with different specialism strengths and needs. The finished product will have specific, real-world intended outcomes for the client and will give students a taste of 'professional' expectations.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Apply their collaborative, technical and creative skills to produce engaging media artefacts which respond meaningfully to a community-generated brief or commission;
2. Interact effectively within a team, showing abilities at different times to listen, contribute, respond to feedback and lead effectively;
3. Assess his/her own work in a reflective manner, with reference to wider academic and professional issues, debates and conventions and demonstrating an awareness of professional codes of practice.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

Similarly to the first year project, students will initially be supported in their negotiations and meetings with the client group. Once comfortable, the student(s) will be supported only via tutorial and will have individual directorial control over the product and outcomes. They are able to call on the college's support at any time as required but the more the students can take ownership of this project, the more they will learn about community media collaboration. Lecturers will provide a series of workshops on collaborative work for students and client groups to guide them through difficult technical or creative decisions.

SHORT MODULE DESCRIPTOR: (max 425 characters)

The module presents opportunities to students to refine creative and technical skills in a specialist sector of the creative media industries they might wish to engage with on leaving. Both Maya and video projection mapping are growing markets and the skills required are not yet commonly available. The option units were carefully selected to offer students a meaningful career focus in a developing specialist / 'niche' market.

MODULE AIMS:

To provide students with the technological and creative resources to further explore digital design and production techniques to create products entirely generated or controlled using computer graphics. The primary aim for the module is to enable students to present a highly relevant and accomplished portfolio of multimedia work to prospective employers or to support applications for progression in HE. The portfolio may be presented as a show reel or promotional website or as an installation.

ASSESSED LEARNING OUTCOMES: (additional guidance below)

At the end of the module the learner will be expected to be able to:

1. Demonstrate a detailed knowledge of the key production techniques and processes involved in producing and exhibiting multimedia projects which reflect contemporary professional practice;
2. Produce creative work in response to a given brief which demonstrates complex technical competency and reflects an awareness of relevant aesthetic considerations;
3. Undertake appropriate research to prepare production planning prior to production approval.

SUMMARY of MODULE CONTENT

Further instruction will be given in Maya (3d pathway) or video mapping and projection applications (installation pathway) which will help students achieve their creative goals. Students who wish to explore other forms of digital exhibition will be supported as far as possible. Historically, we have delivered modules encompassing narratives explored through video installation and interactive teaching tools. These are all achievable with the current staff skill set and technical resources.
